

Uranus    Jupiter    Neptune

The night sky about 9 p.m., mid-January 2024

From a drawing by Jim Barker

The inset shows the position of the Orion Nebula, where the James Webb Space Telescope has discovered pairs of ‘stray’ planets, independent of stars, whose existence is currently a mystery.